

The Role of School Nurses: Evidence-based Practice, Globalization and Policy Formulation

Date: 25th - 29th July 2011

Venue: The Hong Kong Polytechnic University, Hong Kong

Ms. Kathleen Fritsch

Regional Advisor, Nursing
Western Pacific Regional Office
World Health Organization
Manila, Philippines

Kathleen Fritsch received her Bachelors Degree in Nursing from the University of Wisconsin, USA and her Masters Degree from the University of Washington. Her education as a nurse practitioner was undertaken at Emory University (Adult Nurse Practitioner) and the University of Mississippi (Pediatric Nurse Practitioner). Subsequently, she worked for the U.S. Government in rural Mississippi, serving the primary health care needs of underserved, vulnerable population groups. For over ten years she served as a faculty member of the University Of Washington School Of Nursing, as well as holding a clinical practice position in community health clinics.

She has been working for the World Health Organization since 1992; her current position is Regional Adviser in Nursing, WHO Western Pacific Region. Kathleen has served on various academic and professional bodies. She has a background as a nurse practitioner, educator and consultant, with a focus on rural and remote health services and access to quality services for underserved and vulnerable populations. Her contributions to the advancement of nursing knowledge include the production of clinical protocols for nurse practitioners, authoring of chapters in published nursing texts, the publication of articles in refereed journals, as well as the publication of videotape education series, computer simulations and self-study manuals.
